Pre-requisite/ Co-requisite/ Exclusion	Exclusion subjects: CC1C04, CC1C04P, CC1CM04, CC1CM04P and CC201
Objectives	The important role China is playing in the international scene makes it almost imperative that students have an informed understanding of its contemporary history and culture. This subject pinpoints the origins, development and consequences of important historical events in the last century to help students make sense of the tumults that China has been going through. The course begins with accounts of the social-political-cultural crises at the end of the Qing dynasty, where, with increasing contact with the Western powers, China underwent a period of self-examination, during which its traditional institutions and values were critically scrutinized and questioned. The rallying cry of democracy and science in the beginning of the twentieth century was followed by more sober reevaluation of Chinese culture. The subject will then proceed to consider the struggles and cooperation between the Chinese Nationalist Party (Guomindang /GMD) and the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), the revolutions these parties led during the war-ridden years in the first half of the twentieth century, the CCP's subsequent control of the Mainland, and policies carried out by the CCP.
Intended Learning Outcomes (Note 1)	Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(a) obtain a comparative perspective on the GMD and the CCP revolutions with regard to the interactions and mutual-penetrations of their ideologies and organizations, as well as the personalities of their leaders;</li> <li>(b) master the following key concepts as tools to understand contemporary China: power structure, political institution, social mobility, class struggle, ideological indoctrination, mass media manipulation, public criticism and humiliation, interdependence of ideology;</li> <li>(c) gain insight on the every-day life of ordinary people in contemporary China in terms of their hardship and happiness, desperation and hope, as well as submissiveness and passive resistance;</li> <li>(d) compare the similarities and differences in the political systems of mainland China, Taiwan and Hong Kong as well as those of totalitarian and democratic states in general;</li> </ul>

Subject Synopsis/ Indicative Syllabus (Note 2)	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Note 1: Intended Learning Outcomes

Intended learning outcomes should state what students should be able to do or attain upon subject completion. Subject outcomes are expected to contribute to the attainment of the overall programme outcomes.

Note 2: Subject Synopsis/Indicative Syllabus

The syllabus should adequately address the intended learning outcomes. At the same time, overcrowding of the syllabus should be avoided.

Note 3: Teaching/Learning Methodology

This section should include a brief description of the teaching and learning methods to be employed to facilitate learning, and a justification of how the methods are aligned with the intended learning outcomes of the subject.

Note 4: Assessment Method

This section should include the assessment method(s) to be used and its relative weighting, and indicate which of the subject intended learning outcomes that each method is intended to assess. It should also provide a brief explanation of the appropriateness of the assessment methods in assessing the intended learning outcomes.
